HENRY BRISCOE'S BREAK,

With.

On the 14th of January last Officers Couch and Johnson, of the police force, arrested in Atlanta a negro boy by the name of Henry Briscoe, chargedwith breaking into and robbing the residence of Alfred Shaw, of Madison. These officers picked up Briscoe on Peters street as he was leaving the city. Upon being scarched at the station-house, where he was carried and locked up until transportation could be procured for him to Madison, on his person was found $79,35 and a watch. The amount of money taken from Mr. Shaw was $80. Briscoe was carried back to Madison, and the trial came off at that place Thursday last and resulted in the conviction of the defendant of the charge of burglary in the night.

As the evidence submitted in the case showed beyond a doubt that Briscoe was the man who committed the burglary, and that the defendant was known to be a man of bad character, it is concelled that the sentence will be a heavy one. The officers who made the arrest secured a reward of $25 which was offered for the capture of the defendant and the recovery of the money. The robbery was committed on the night of the 13th, and the arrest of Briscoe was made the following day. Officer Couch and Captain Starnes attended the trial and testified in the case.

The manifesto expresses regret at the death of the unfortunate soldiers in the palace, but declares that such catastrophes are inevitable so long as the army is the bulwark of imperial autocracy; says that the revolution is forced on Russia by the government's repression of intellectual development, and that the struggle must continue till the czar abdicates or grants a constitution, and it declares "we will triumph at all costs."

Vlodelsky, the nibilist who attempted to shoot General Melikoff on Wednesday last, was brought to-day from the fortress to the place of execution, strapped in a sitting posture on a black vehicle with his back to the horses. A placard, bearing the words "state criminal," was attached to his breast. A company of Cossacks formed the escort. An Important Decision. The supreme court of the United States has recently decided a very important question relating to the relations of attorney and client. It arose in the case of the National Savings bank, of the District of Columbia, vs Ward. The plaintiffs sued the defendant and alleged as the cause of action that it retained him to examine the title of the possessor of the premises described in the declaration. The defendant reported the title good and unincumbered. It turned out that the owner of the premises, who was the borrower, was insolvent, and had no good title to the property. The case was tried before the supreme court of the District of Columbia and a verdict rendered for the defendant, and the case went to the supreme court of the United States and was affirmed.

The proof in the case showed that the plaintiffs did not employ the defendant, but that he was employed by the man that borrowed the money, and that the loan was obtained from the plaintiffs on presentation by the borrowers of the certificate of the defendant that the title was good. And it was on this proof that a verdict was rendered for the defendant.

in affirming the decision of the court below held that the attorney could only be held liable by his client; that the negligent party is liable only to the perwith whom he contracted, the ground that negligence is a breach of the contract. If the plaintiffs had employed the attorney, and he had misled them by his report as to the titles of the borrower, there would have been no escape from a judgment in favor of the plaintiffs. Even under the facts in this case, Chief-Justice Waite and Justices Swayne and Bradley corded title of real property, gives his client a certificate which he knows is to be used by the client in some business dence of the facts certified to, he is liable to such other person relying on his certificate for any loss resulting from his failure to find on record a conveyance offsetting the title which by the use of ordinary professional care and skill he

The whole court reaffirms the law that an attorney employed by a purchaser of sonable care and skill in the performance of the undertaking, and that reasonable care and skill is also required by law of an attorney when employed to investigate the title to real estate, with a view to ascercain whether it is a safe and sufficient security for a loan of money, and lowed to its logical conclusion, and that in either case, if the attorney is negligent or fails to exercise reasonable care and skill in the performance of the service, and loss ensues to his employer from such negligence or want of care and are unworthy the respect and confidence skill, he may be held liable to his employers for the consequences of such negligence.

We have made several casual efforts ecently to arouse discussion with respect to the propriety of enforcing or dispensing with the two-thirds rule in the naional democratic convention at Cincinnati, and in the state convention to be held in Georgia in the near future; but thus far our exchanges seem inclined to treat the subject with that coy circumspection which is at once the shield and mor of the profession. Nevertheless, the question is an exceedingly interesting one, and, as a measure of party policy, falls within the scope of that sort of family discussion which is suggestive in the approaching state elections, the rather than assertive, and which is intended to invite opinions rather than to for a campaign of somewhat imposing champion any. It is certain that in the proportions. How successful these thirds rule has an important bearing upon the power and influence of the south in national convention, and the question is, does it lend to that power and influice, or does it detract from them? They general matter, then the next number of have 306 delegates to the next convention, and will almost certainly east 153 (or 82.7 per cent) of the 185 votes necessary to elect the democratic president. Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, New Jersey, Colorado, Nevada, California and Oregon gave Tilden 1,564,624 popular votes, and Hayes a plurality over him of 384,093, and of their 153 electoral votes Hayes received 144. These states also have 306 delegates, and of the 185 electors required to win the fight, the democrats can only hope for those of New Jersey, Colorado Nevada, California and Oregon, twentyfour, or about 13 per cent. Here, then, the strength of seventeen democratic states, which gave Tilden over 6,000 votes for each delegate they are to have at Cincinnati, is offset by eighteen states, nearly all of which are hopelessly republican, which latter will have one delegate for every 5,113 democratic votes in 1876. The New England states (Connecticut excepted) with Pennsylvania and the northwestern states, exclusive of Ohio and Indiana, have 264 delegates, and under the majority rule they would lack only 106 votes to give them control of the nomination, and the votes of New York (70) and Ohio (44) would give such a combination full control, with eight votes to spare. But if a two-thirds vote be required, the republican states need to obtain 228 votes to overpower the democratic states, and to secure these must get the undivided vote of New York, Ohio, New Jersey, Connecticut, Colorado, The supreme court of the United States Nevada, California and Oregon, each of which is more or less doubtful, and all of them having 174 delegates in the next convention, and even then they would fall short of two-thirds just forty-four votes, which would have to be drawn from the democratic states. The argument in favor of the two-thirds rule is that no nomination can be made against the protest of even one-sixth of the delegates from the democratic states. Against the majority rule it may be probably urged that these republican states, with 264 votes, can, by uniting with doubtfu. states, rear a platform and nomidissented—holding that if a lawyer employed to examine and certify to the rewishes of the democratic states. According to these figures, the two-thirds Russia, mother of the rule gives the democratic states the balance of power, while the majority rule leaves them at the mercy of states hopelessly republican.

This is one view of the subject. The The New Orleans Picayune learns that the youngest twins of the Hood orphans have been taken by a gentleman and his wife, residing in New York, who have adopted them.

This is one view of the subject. The tions that will suggest themselves. It must be borne in mind that the figures we have given are really figurative. If they are to be considered as overpowering, it follows, as a matter of course, that real estate to examine the title thereto, those democrats who represent republican states in the convention must come under the ban of suspicion; they must be regarded as conspirators, whose intention it is to force a weak candidate upon other states, in order to break up the party. In other words, if the argument of the figures which we have given conclusion is that the democrats who unfortunately represent hopelessly republican states in the national convention of the delegates from democratic states. Nevertheless, the figures are suggestive enough to deserve consideration in connection with a full, fair and free discussion of the question. There is also to be discussed the question of renewing or abrogating the twothird's rule in the state convention, as well as in the district conventions. It is claimed, and, apparently, with good reason, that nothing has given rise to more dissension and dissatisfaction in the party than the application of the rule in local conventions; that nothing has contributed so largely to the building up of the independent party in the state. This is also a matter for consideration and discussion, and the discussion cannot begin too early. It is to be borne in mind that independents are making preparations preparations will be remains to be seen; but it is a question for discussion whether it would not be well for the party in the state to make overtures of an honorable compromise with this element of the democracy. There is certainly nothing to

A Very Good Suggestion.

One of our exchanges suggests that President Estill call the Georgia press association together for the purpose of memoralizing congress on the subject of the removal of the tariff on pristing paper. A better plan would be for every publisher or editor in the state to write a personal letter to his representative in cougress, and ask his influence in the matter. Congress could anot and would not resist such appeal made directly by editors and publishers upon a question that is of so much importance to the entire people. We are confident that General Phit. Cook, of this district, will lend his influence in behalf of the press and the people, and we believe every representative from Georgia would do so if asked by the press of their respective districts. This is the better plan for the papers of the state.

THE TRIAL OF SIMPSON.

He is Acquitted of the Charge Mad Yesterday morning the trial of F. M mpson, a policeman, charged wit assault with intent to murder Private Bergen, of the Fifth artillery, by shooting him with a pistol, was concluded, resulting in the dismissal of the case and the discharge of the defendant.

Justice Waters, before whom the case was tried, managed the investigation with notable fairness from beginning to end, allowing each slde all scope within the limits of the law.

The evidence on both sides of the case, as well as the argument of Judge Wright for the risoner, having been concluded the day previous, Mr. Goodwin, counsel for the prisoner, had the floor at the opening of the court in the morning. Upon the conclusion of his argument, Hoke Smith, counsel for the prosecution, made the concluding speech in the case. After hearing the evidence and argument in the case, and deliberating a few moments, Justice Waters, in a few remarks, dismissed the charges against the defendant. Mr. Simpson, who is regarded as a most efficient officer, and quite popular with his brothers of the baton, was warmly congratulated by his many friends on the force, as well as scores of citizens who were in court at the time, and who had watched the case with much interest. PICKING UP THINGS.

The Chase After Wash. Johnson, Col-

Yesterday morning a negro by the name of Wash. Johnson, entered the store of Mr. Adams, on Peachtree street, and picking up the first thing he saw, which was a box of eggs, commenced to make off with his plunder. The proprietors saw him as he picked up the eggs and gave chase. As soon as the darkey saw that his pursuers were gaining on him, he unloaded himself were gaining on him, he unloaded missin of the box of eggs and struck a more rapid gait. After a race of several blocks, the negro was captured by his pursuers and carried to the station house. Yesterday afternoon a preliminary trial was held and the negro sent to jail.

If to render others happy, even though it be oul aring an evening's opera, constitutes a source happiness to one's own self, Miss Abbott must pear radiant with the beatific frame fo mind in ch she found herself yesterday morning. Rently she appeared before a magnificent hous DeGive's, and Thursday night the theater wa iled, while the audience seemed to possess those racteristics which add their mite to the gen characteristics which add their mite to the general popularity and success. Fashion and beauty lent their prestige, and a kindly liberafity crowned artistic efforts with floral offerings and with an intense eithusiasm, heightened by admiration. Faust was more acceptable to many thair was Romeo and Juliet. We much doubt if any opera written on a play of Shakspeare can please all, or maintain a permanent popularity. The "Lovers of Verona," by the Marquis D'Ivey, was for a time a success. The Romeo and Juliet of this opera thoroughly identified themselves with their impersonation; the "square in Verona" was represented with magnificent scenery; the "balcony scene" was an inspiration of poetic volutiousness: the melody of Father Lawrence; the "dueis," in short the entire opera was beautiful, and yet it never had a general popularity. Vaccai, Bellini, and several others have written plays and operas founded on the Romeo and Juliet of Shakspeare, but doubtless Gounod's opera is the best, and has met with more success than any of the others. It comes nearer the powerful conception of Shakspeare, and yet it can have no permanent popularity. In the score Gounod abandoned the melody which is transceudent in Faust for harmony that did not prove equally attractive. Again, Romeo and Juliet has not the sweet airs that distinguish Faust, Trovatore, and Martha. It is a fine piece of work, yet one not called for again and again. Of much merit, in the intensity and realism of her acting, gifted with a mobile countenance and much power of expression, Miss Abbut doubtless embodies the conception of the Bard of Avon perhaps as correctly as it ever has been interpreted, yet her Juliet is not as satisfactory erpreted, yet her value her Marguerite. Sounod's opera of Faust is a favorite dram erwhere. The French composer his esti-erwhere. Gounod's opera of Faust is a favorite drama everywhere. The French composer his established his reputation with this Faust, which Barbier and Carre have concocted for him from Goethe's original. One cause, perhaps, of its popularity is that people like to see the innocent Marguerite fall into the snares of Satan.

The personation of Marguerite by Miss Abbott last evening was exceedingly satisfactory. Whether in the happy or melancholy phases of the character, she was equally pleasing Her well-trained voice, skillful dramatic conception and expressive face were artistically managed. She has much power in displaying her qualities and histrionic resources. she may be open to criticism in some particulars. Some may think that as an actress she is above the level of her vocal abilities; that there is a disparity between her intellectual and physical powers—between her conception, which is good and true, and her or and true, and her o gan, which is, perhaps, a little weak and irre-sponsive: yet they must admit that she is a fin-ished emotional actress and a singer of much merit, and there is a refinement and naturalness in her personation which will always commend her. Her voice, a light so-prano, is pure in tone; the soul speaks through her voice, and the emotion of the one adds fresh charms to the cultivation of the other. There is no doubt of the fact that she is a fa-vorite.

Mr. Tom Karl, with his fine physique, and handsome face, renderred the role of "Faust" in an earnest, painstaking manner. His neat method and intelligent phrasing are as much to be admired as the broad, yet sweet timbre of his voice. If any of the power and firmness of his role. If any of the power and firmness of his rehand bright, tenor voice is gone, it was not perceptible. His acting is admirable.

Mr. McDouald was suited to the character of "Mephist," and amused the audience by his excellent acting, and delighted them by his good singing. ement acting, and deligated them by his good singing.

Mr. A. E. Stoddard gave a true, honest portrayal of "Valentine." He is a conscientious artist, gifted with a rich baratone voice.

The chorus was harmonious, carefully trained and instructed, and gave due effect and point to the many changing features of the music.

The orchestra was very efficient, and the leader sig. Tomasi, deserves much credit for the manner in which the introductions and accompaniments were rendered.

in which the introductions and accompaniments were rendered.

The opera was well placed upon the stage, the scenery and costumes being appropriate and in good taste.

Miss Abbott has an excellent company and one well adjusted. The singers are artists, and are good actors besides. We express the regret of our community that the stay with us of the Emma Abbott troupe has been so short as to give us but a taste of the musical feast she ever provides.
